

HAMPTON, PHOEBUS AND OLD POINT—Continued.

WITH THE VETERANS

Money Galore.

The more than two thousand members residing at the southern branch of the National Soldiers Home are on the tip-toe of expectation as to when the next quarterly pension will be paid. The rolls have been signed and all pensioners answered to muster on the fourth of the present month, and soon as Treasurer Hume receive the abstract preparation will be immediately made for payment. This may occur during the present week, at the same time it is highly probable this greatly anticipated order to "fall in line" will come on Tuesday or Wednesday of next week.

The amount to be disbursed by check and cash will in all probability reach one hundred and ten thousand dollars.

The philosopher whose head is always filled with wise saws, and is known by nearly every man on the reservation for his powers of observation, said to your correspondent: "Have you noted in your travels most frequently by ladies how seemingly crooked in figure they are becoming? Just take a sharp look and you will observe that either the right or left shoulder will hike up a bit. Do you know the reason? I will tell you. It comes from having to hold up the skirt or dress. If the right hand is used, the left shoulder will droop, and when the left hand does the office, the same action will show in the right shoulder." Continuing his story, he said: "Just why women will continue to practice this fad is as late as the late E. A. Southern used to say, 'One of those things no fellow can find out.'"

The train to a lady's dress is made to drag, and if it don't drag, why have the fool thing at all, especially to a street costume. While the train should sweep the sidewalk, every woman you see, will be trying her utmost to prevent it doing so, and thus her form becomes misshapen and absolutely ugly. Your sisters and sweethearts would uphold and maintain the prevalent fad that we of America, who boast of having the fairest and handsomest carriage a woman can obtain, will surely have to forego this pleasant memory unless the unsightly train is done away with, especially when on promenade on the public streets. The girls of today insist on carrying so much weight in their hands, must need attend a gymnasium and get back to their original form.

A Love Match.

Jonathan McKelvey, chief of the tailoring department of the home, after a bachelorhood of many years standing, will on April 27, take to wife Mrs. W. H. Williams, widow of the late Captain W. H. Williams, who was lost in Chesapeake Bay several years ago. The contracting parties are well known to many members of this branch and to the upper circles of citizens in and about Phoebus.

After a wedding tour of some duration, the happy couple will go to house keeping in Phoebus.

Mayor Furness.

The citizens of the town of Phoebus have much cause to be proud of their mayor. Since his induction into office, Mayor Furness has been indefatigable in his efforts to uphold the town, and however unpropitious the weather he can be seen at any point where improvements are going on giving personal attention to the manner in which the work is being done. He has the right way of doing anything he undertakes, and his direct care of the construction of sewer work will prove of benefit to the citizens of Phoebus in the years to come.

Washer-Women.

In a branch of the national home populated as largely as the Southern, it may be safely estimated that at least one in every ten members send their underclothing, and top shirts out to be washed. The class most given to this habit are chiefly city men, who prefer to use store underwear to that furnished by the government. The latter contingent are numerically strong, and in order to save money, not a few of this class will wash their own linen. For this purpose an excellent washery is provided on the bank of Jones Creek between the home laundry and bakery. Here hot water can be had in plenty, lines are stretched in profusion for hanging the clothes to dry and although every day finds hundreds of pieces exposed, it seldom occurs that any are purloined. The wash sent out is taken by both men and women, and these industrious people are able to earn a fair living. The number of these workers will probably foot up a round dozen, and the members use their own judgement in selecting a white or colored person to keep their wear tidy. The exactness is a mere bagatelle, five cents for each garment, and the outlay is well spent when the comfort derived from hand washed goods are considered.

All home garments, as well as civilian underwear worn by members can be sent each week to the home laundry for renovation. For this of course there is no charge.

A Happy Pair.

An old colored couple, residents of Phoebus, can be seen any morning soon after eleven o'clock, entering the home on their way to the hospital to partake of dinner. The man is blind, an ex-Civil war soldier and depends upon his help-mate, who acts as conductor. This pair of old people are very much attached to each other, and they seem to be as happy in company as a newly wedded bride and groom. All the members who have been housed here several years or more, know the couple and never fail to extend a word of greeting as they pass them by. The old mummy is witty in her way and in answer to a salutation of a vet, recently said: "See here mister, you am always respectful and pity me and me ole man, but that done do me no good. If your pity had a little money 'tached to it, den it would be all right."

A letter from the Mountain Branch near Johnson City, Tennessee, brings a signed statement issued by the Hon. Walter P. Brownlow, representative of the First Tennessee district in the popular branch of congress in which he exhorts his constituents in part as follows:

"When first elected to congress I promised the people I would stay in my seat in congress and look after their interests, and if my record was satisfactory, I felt sure I could depend on my constituents to look after my interests at home, while I attended to business here. I felt that I had no more right to leave my place of business here, and go out and look after renomination than any other hired man had to look for other work on the salary of his employer. I have been in congress nearly fourteen years, and have kept my word with the people in this respect."

After referring to his candidacy for renomination to succeed himself as a member of the 62nd congress, he says: "I have tried to serve you honestly and faithfully, I have never let an opportunity pass when it was in my power to do anything for my country, and especially for my constituents. I have been present more days during my service in congress than any other member who has served during that period. I have never absented myself from my seat for the purpose of furthering my political interests, and I shall not leave my seat in this campaign. I have always thought, and still think that my time belongs to my country and to you, and not to myself. During my term of service in congress, I have procured and brought to our district in round figures eight million of dollars. This is more than has been secured by any other member during the same period. This will give for each month of my service $100,000. This brings a permanent income to our district annually: For rural free delivery, $300,000; for maintenance of the soldiers' home, $310,000; for pension disbursements at the soldiers home, $255,000; for custom house at Bristol, Tenn.; fish hatchery at Erwin; U. S. court house and post office at Greenville, and the Andrew Johnson National cemetery, an annual outlay of $50,000."

CANNON THROWN OUT OF GREAT POWER SEAT

makes no pretense of remembering any parallel for the sensational scenes which characterized the last few days in the house.

Cannon's Challenge. When this day's developments reached a crisis about five o'clock this afternoon, he would have been a rash prophet who attempted to forecast the outcome. There were moments when it looked as if the preponderantly Republican house might even cap the climax by electing Champ Clark speaker. In fact, not only was this actually proposed in a motion by Mr. Clark, of Florida, but Speaker Cannon himself, in his "def" to the house, declared that his enemies should be consistent and proceed to the election of a Democratic speaker. It was indeed this challenge to the house, daring as it was, which instantly provoked the Burleson resolution for his gethronement, turned the tide again in his favor, and rallied the Republicans, regulars and insurgents, together with few exceptions to the point of what may be termed a vote of confidence.

He Stands Calm.

Through it all, the aged speaker, invariably calm, stoical, consistent to the end, stood in his place, his gavel punctuating the riotous confusion with steady thumps upon his desk. Upon the conclusion of the vote which cast him out of his place of power at the head of the rules committee, he asked "the indulgence of the house for three minutes."

Many Republicans recalled the speaker's retort when they proposed to nominate him on the Roosevelt ticket for the vice-presidency—"they can't make a political cunuch out of me."

Developments of the Day.

The logic of today's developments led inexorably to the climax. It can be told in a chronological order:

9:30 a. m.—Republicans of both factions conferred in an effort to reach the compromise which seemed possible when the house, late yesterday, adjourned largely for that purpose, after two days' fruitless struggle—virtually dealocked.

11 a. m.—The conference broke up and it was announced that the fight would be to the finish. The speaker's friends refused every proposition which tended to his humiliation.

11:45 a. m.—Insurgent Republicans met and voted unanimously to support the Norris resolution, when amended so as to provide for the election of the rules committee by the house, with the speaker eliminated.

Calls House to Order.

Noon—Speaker Cannon called the house to order. An attempt to recess failed. The speaker then ruled that the Norris resolution was not privileged.

12:42 p. m.—Norris appealed from the speaker's decision. Dallzell moved to lay the appeal on the table.

1:04 p. m.—Dallzell's motion to table the Norris appeal was defeated, 164 to 181.

1:05 p. m.—Norris moved the previous question on the appeal from the decision of the chair.

1:29 p. m.—The previous question was ordered, 182 to 160.

1:54 p. m.—The house sustained the appeal from the speaker's table, 182 to 160.

1:56 p. m.—The Norris resolution was read from the desk, preliminary to a vote.

2:08 p. m.—Norris moved to amend his resolution to the form in which it was finally adopted. Extended debate ensued.

4:31 p. m.—The Norris resolution was amended and adopted, 191 to 155.

4:32 p. m.—Norris moved to adjourn, but withheld the motion at the request of the speaker.

Speaker Begins Statement.

4:33 p. m.—Speaker Cannon began his statement to the house, in which he declined to resign, but invited a motion to depose him from the speakership.

4:46 p. m.—Burleson, of Texas, offered his resolution declaring the office of speaker vacant and calling for immediate election of a new speaker. Norris made the point that his withheld motion to adjourn had precedent over the Burleson resolution. Pandemonium.

4:55 p. m.—Order was partially restored, and the speaker ruled that the motion to adjourn did take precedence, but he asked that it be withdrawn. Norris declined to withdraw it.

5:03 p. m.—The house, by division, refused to adjourn. This made the Burleson resolution the question before the house. A roll call was immediately ordered upon it.

5:29 p. m.—The Burleson resolution to declare the speakership vacant was defeated, 155 to 191.

5:30 p. m.—The house adjourned with many Republicans singing, "He's a jolly good fellow," as they fell into line to shake the hand of the speaker.
